

Who is taking your drugs?

Most people are unaware they're putting their families at risk by keeping expired medications. Over time, medications lose their potency and can be harmful to your health. Left in the medicine cabinet, expired medications, especially pain medications and opioids, can result in accidental poisoning, misuse or abuse. Nearly 70% of teenagers that use prescription medication without a prescription get them from medicine cabinets of friends or family.

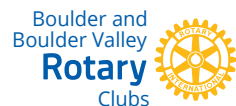

How can you get rid of old medications?

Flushing down the toilet or disposal in the trash releases potentially dangerous drugs into streams and landfills, endangering fish and wildlife. Boulder's Rotary clubs, Boulder County Health Department, the State Department of Health and Environment and your pharmacist encourage you to dispose of medications safely.

- Empty your unused pills in a plastic bag.
- Drop the bag at any of the approved locations (see other side).
- Mark out any personal information on the empty pill bottles and recycle the plastic containers.
